

I would like to paint

I would like to paint the grey-blue dolphin as it leaps from the water ,
Twisting and turning like an incredible acrobat.

I would like to paint the peaceful tranquility of a lake glistening in the sun,
The water gently lapping the shore.

I would like to paint a camouflaged jaguar,
Creeping through the undergrowth stalking it's prey.

I would like to paint the hunger of the angry waves ,
Consuming everything in their path before crashing into the jagged cliff side.

I would like to paint the vibrant indigos, scarlets and oranges of the everlasting sky,
As the glowing sun sets over the horizon.

I would like to paint the intricate patterned wings of a butterfly,
Dancing and twirling silently in the wind.
